

Boston Thursday.

My Dear Anne

As Henry and Caroline came out Sunday, you have I suppose heard all the news up to then. I did not go to meeting all day Sunday, nor Maria either, she employed herself writing a letter to Jonathan Phillips asking for money to publish Mrs Lollen's book, we have not heard from him yet. In the evening Johnson called. Monday. No news in the morning Edmund Quincy came and took tea with us and spent the evening, and wanted Maria very much to go on to New-York. Tuesday. The pledge is said! was said the first of May. We all went in the evening and heard Garrison, it was you know a rather rainy evening, and Johnson thinking but few people would be there put it down into the lower hall instead of the Chapel as it had been advertised. So we were very much crowded and very hot, it was a very fine lecture indeed, Wendell spoke a few minutes while they were getting money. After Garrison had done speaking a man went up onto the platform, a very fine looking man and introduced himself to Garrison, a Capt Fullerton an Englishman just from Jamaica, he was present when Thompson and Breckenbridge had their discussion. We had letters from Delora to day which I will send out, you see what a state she must be in for news. I could not make Maria write, but I wrote a letter full to overflowing, and sent her every letter that had been in the cross since she had been gone, and documents of all sort. Henry brought up a letter to Mr Flint and a paper which I send Maria had nothing we have seen the inside of it - you may be sure and I will tell you what was in it - when I see you, nothing in it except the wedding.

I forgot to say that at the meeting they got 90 dollars. After the meeting Collins and Jones came and staid till late, Jones let loose upon Boston, to go round and get all the money he could, Mr Kingsbury did not well till late and said he was going out at half past two so that I am in a great hurry.
This evening I went down to the rooms to get the Liberator I saw nobody but Collins, what do you think of Phelps resignation. Henry has received to day from Abby Kelly 70 dollars so you see Abby is doing something. Whether Henry will be able to go on to New-York or not, is uncertain, but I think very like he will his father has got down stairs. I hope you will come in Saturday, I think it is time to make a visit, I shall not come out to Weymouth at present. I am making me a new gown mousselin de soie at 25 cent a yard, and quite pretty. Love to our folks and Grandmam's.

Yours affectionately

Lucia Weston
